TARC guides students to A-level success

SINCE its inception 40 years, Tunku Abdul Rahman College's (TAR) School of Pre-University Studies (SPUS) has spearheaded the college's development by having the A-Level programme and producing high achievers year after year.

For last year's October/November examination, TAR College produced 62 candidates with 3As and above, a 63 per cent increase from the previous year's examination.

The school held the award-presentation ceremony on Feb 9. Students attributed their success to dedicated lecturers, academic rigour and pastoral care.

The top scorers pasted their photos and wrote notes on an achievement board.

Aren Tang Minyi, who scored 5As and who aspires to be a physicist, said: "I have been blessed to have great lecturers who guided me all the way."

Elise Lai Pei Chze attributed her success to her parents, who supported her unconditionally.

"They encouraged me to make my own decisions concerning my choice of course", said Lai, who scored four As.

TAR College advocates a curriculum that encompasses theoretical study and practical learning. It also provides motivational classes and one-to-one student-lecturer consultation sessions.

The Parent-Lecturer Day held twice a year also brings about interaction between parents and lecturers for them to work together for students.

Next month's intake is in progress and application forms are available at TAR College campuses.

Online application is available at www.tarc.edu.my.
