Freshies overjoyed by TAR’s orientation

By Paul Teh

GEORGE TOWNS: Orientation is showed by new graduates with diverse and background.

Happily, for the more than 1,500 freshies who graduated college’s Lord’s College, Orientation is a new chapter in their lives. The college is known for its low student-to-teacher ratio, which provides a more personalized learning experience.

Orientation is an important part of the college’s mission. It is designed to help new students transition smoothly into college life. During Orientation, students are introduced to the college’s policies, procedures, and resources. They also have the opportunity to meet their peers and faculty, and to begin building a sense of community.

Altogether, the Orientation program is meant to help new students find their place in the college community. It is an opportunity to connect with others who share similar experiences and goals. For new students, Orientation is a chance to begin their college journey with a sense of purpose and belonging.

One of the highlights of Orientation is the chance to meet new people. Students are encouraged to take part in group activities and to engage with their peers. This helps to build a sense of camaraderie and teamwork, which is important for a successful college experience.

In conclusion, Orientation is a crucial part of the college experience. It is a time of transition, and a chance to start a new chapter in life. For new students, it is a chance to connect with others, to learn new skills, and to begin building a sense of community. With the support of the college, new students can feel confident and prepared to take on the challenges ahead.

A sea of eager faces: Freshmen are all set during a talk.

Freshmen getting a wet welcome.

All for one: Freshmen with Teck Eng Ho (4th from left).

Is the chopstick-savy? A student taking part in a telematch game.

Getting to know you: One of the ice-breaking activities.

New students get ready for the challenges ahead in college life.